Have an idea in mind? We'd love to chat with you! Tag:Q: How do I center a JPanel while viewing a JFrame? I am trying to use Swing to display an image on a JPanel. The size of the image is determined when I update it, so when I click the button to display the image, the image might be smaller or larger than the screen. I want to keep the JFrame window and all its components (ScrollPane, JTextArea, etc.) positioned the same while the image changes. So, for example, if I have an image of 1000x1000 pixels and the window is 800x600, I want the image centered, but all the components to be centered in the window. If I scale the image to be 200x200, all the components should scale to fit in the window. I have a basic idea of what to do, but I can't figure out how to apply this to the code I have. Can someone tell me what I should do? import javax.swing.JButton; import javax.swing.
